Before your pet undergoes surgery, it will be examined for any problems that could interfere with anesthesia to avoid risks such as cardiac and/or respiratory arrest. Just like humans, your pet will have a pre-anesthetic blood test performed prior to any surgical procedure. Our pre-anesthetic screening consists of blood chemistries that check for disorders of the liver, kidneys, blood sugar levels, protein levels and other disease processes as well as complete blood count (CBC) which checks levels of white and red blood cells, platelets, and electrolytes. For our more mature patients (6 years of age and over) and for any pets with chronic health problems, we may recommend more extensive medical tests to evaluate the safety of anesthetics and surgery.

If your pet is found to have fleas or other external parasites, your pet will be treated before entering surgery, at your expense. This will be done to ensure a sterile surgery environment as well as controlling fleas in hospital environment.

ALL ITEMS LISTED BELOW ARE OPTIONAL AND WILL COST MORE!

Please initial in either the Yes or No column

____ Yes ____ No Laser Incision ($11.00): Therapy laser is a painless procedure that helps stimulate tissue regeneration and promotes cell growth. This will result in both decreased healing times and decreased pain for your pet.

____ Yes ____ No Microchip ($61.00): Provides peace of mind that if your pet is ever lost he/she has a permanent, lifetime ID implanted in them so they can be linked to you and get back home. This also includes the first year of registration.

____ Yes ____ No Pre-Surgical Cerenia ($32.50): This helps to prevent your pet in possible vomiting after waking up from anesthesia. It also helps their appetite return to normal much faster. Plus, it helps with visceral pain which is pain related to the internal organs in the middle of the body.
